Dame Rumor Has It That the Work-Gate mine, at Mercur, by means of a Exchange

There are some men in this city who contend that the East Golden Gate will have to go 2,000 feet before reaching the ore body, if they strike ore at all, and all contend that if mineral is found there that it will mean much for the

In developing this mine a shaft was sunk on a small stringer of high-grade brounds ore, but at a depth of twenty feet the vein was lost, and with the belief that the ore strata would be found by sinking deeper, the shaft was continued until a depth of sixty-five deep was strained. Mr. Barber states that the placer mines of the county are on the eve of producing more gold than ever before in its history, and there is on foot a gigantic scheme that will, when consummated, wash millions out of the great placer deposits of the Big Eaidy, 3,000 feet above the Alder guich. On top of this mountain, which at its highest point is almost 10,000 feer above the level of the sea, is a rich gravel deposit from two feet to fifty feet in depth, rich in gold. There is a sheer descent of about 3,000 feet down into the old historic Alder gulch, from which so much wealth was taken in the early days. The gravel range along this much weard was taken in the early days. The gravel range along this mountain extends about thirty miles one way and varies in width and has always been known to be a placer field of wonderful richness, but has never been worked, as it has been thought impossible to get water up to the great altitude. On account of the gradual in-creased product of the mill a special dividend is contemplated at an early day, and the company hopes soon to increase its dividends from half a cent to two cents a share.

George Dern has returned from his regular weekly visit to the Mercur mine and mill, which he says, are working in a most satisfactory manner. The mill, it is understood, is now treating richer ore than formerly, and the weekly output is therefore larger. During his absence Mr. Dern visited the Northern Light mine, on Lion hill, and he states that he was very favorably impressed with this property.
